TROUBADOUR OF GOLD RUSH DAYS 'SETTLES DOWN'

Arthur 'Epp' Eppler Has Played in All Old Western Mining Camps

A wandering minstrel of the west's gold camps—Arthur O. "Epp" Eppler—has come home.

Born in Hayes valley, in '73; broke in Reno, rich in Goldfield.

"Epp" played for the "princes and princesses," and all the colorful characters of gold rush days and mushroom towns.

He played for Tex Rickard while Tex celebrated signing his first fight between Battling Nelson and Joe Gans, the fight that started Tex on his career in fistiana.

He furnished "atmosphere" for Elinor Glyn in a town long since deserted when she was there to get "color" for one of her earlier books.

He made $250 a week once. But fried eggs were $2.50 and other things in proportion. So, "what profited I?"

He saved his music from three mining camp fires. Then it burned in the fourth and his melody was ended.

When the sourdoughs and camp followers of old Nevada come to San Francisco they come first to see Eppler in his little shop on Market near the Ferry, then San Francisco.

And he's built a substantial little business while "those friends of mine still following the camps are most of them broke," he says.

"Diamond Jack Davis was in town the other day. He has diggin's down in Mexico now. And do you know who was the first man he looked up? It was me.

"Great fellows the early day miners and mining camp men. They never forget a friend."

'Finis' Written in Search For Ship Lost With 50

Overdue! Missing! "Hull down!"

The end has been definitely written into the log of the Danish training ship Kobenhavn, and a San Franciscan has after three years of waning hope finally abandoned thought of ever seeing again his score of friends among the 50 who perished.

"No, the search is ended."

A letter from Eric Sorenson, former radio operator of the Kobenhavn, told A. O. Eppler, Granada Hotel, that no further attempt to find the memberes of the crew he entertained each time the ship was in this port, was practicable.

Given Up for Lost

Sailing from Montevideo, Uruguay, for Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 14, 1928, the steel auxiliary five-masted bark owned by the East Asiatic Co. of Copenhagen has never been heard from since.

The company dispatched the steamer Mexico in search six months later. British ships joined the hunt. But nothing further was ever found.

Thought of the ship has brought many questions for conjecture among men of the sea.

She carried wireless, but there was no call for distress. And she was well found and staunch of hull, 368 feet in length, 49 feet in breadth, 3901 gross tons, and had auxiliary power.

Superstition Told

Did superstition, the sailor's bugbear, play a part in the disappearance?

Adorning the prow of the Kobenhavn was a figurehead of an ancient Danish warrior bearing armor.

Some members of the crew complained that the warrior's eyes followed their movements in an uncanny and disturbing manner which foretold disaster.
